

Siobhan Kelly and Brian Sewell – parents of Brae

We knew as soon as Brae was diagnosed that the only way we could take control was to be really active fundraisers for the A-T Society. In the five years since his diagnosis we have organised Family Fun Days, taken part in cycles, music nights, football tournaments and made fundraising videos.

Our families, friends, schools and neighbours have got involved too and we'd like to think there is always some fundraising planned or going on in Brae's name.

We've always said we don't know where we would be without the A-T Society. They are always there for us at the end of the phone, we've had practical and emotional support whenever we have needed it and the team there are like members of our extended family. We know our lives are better because of the A-T Society and because we have focussed our attention on fundraising we have been able to look ahead and be positive about Brae's future.
